Theme: THEY

May 4

"Concern for Them the Stranger in our Midst"

Deuteronomy 24:14, 17, 21

The Old Testament laws concerning strangers called for them to be treated in radically different ways than the surrounding culture would treat them. The Hebrew people were instructed clearly about how to treat "Them."

"Calling and Passion: The Holy Spirit, Moms and the Home"

Communion Sunday

Acts 2:1-8

On the day of Pentecost a promise of Jesus was fulfilled. The gift of the church, a power within, was given to the disciples. How coincidental that we celebrate Mother's Day this year, a day where women in their transformation from an individual to a mother have had to learn about that power firsthand.

"The Value of the Past"

Philippians 3:12-14

The past and the present form two points on a line that predict but do not preordain the future. Human free will is among the greatest of all the endowed gifts to humankind. To break from the past, while embracing its wisdom is the balance of heritage and evaluation.

"Contours of a Call"

Mark 1:14-21

Rev. Richard D. Landon
