Our creativity is for the greater good. John Wesley said, "Earn all you can, save all you can, give all you can." A creative mind seeks contribution. If we allow ourselves the Divine creativity from within, we are used by God for purposes we may never have planned for ourselves. "We are God's handiwork, created in Christ Jesus to do good works" (Ephesians 2:10).

I

Lord, I am growing in my appreciation of what others have created. I am learning to experience the joy of varied styles of worship. I am learning to truly value diversity. Where do You want me to go next?

How can I be a better "co-creator" with You?

WE

Looking at creativity from a divine standpoint requires action. We must allow God to shine in and through us in generous ways. How are we using our creative spirit as a Christian community to serve beyond our walls?
Are we good disciples for Christ?

How do others see us?

THEY

I Corinthians 13 teaches us that though we possess all gifts, if we do not love, we have nothing. How does recognizing others' unique worthiness help a church grow in love?

How does this recognition increase our responsibility to reach out?
